TRAFFIC ADVISORY

KELLOGG AVENUE REOPENED BETWEEN STANLEY & I-275 MEHRING WAY REOPENED ADJACENT TO PAUL BROWN STADIUM

The Ohio River flood waters have receded to the point that it is possible to reopen Kellogg Avenue between Stanley Avenue and I-275 and also Mehring Way adjacent to Paul Brown Stadium.

City crews immediately cleared debris and removed the road closed barricades from Kellogg Avenue at noon, today, January 13, 2005. Flood waters continue to keep Kellogg Avenue closed east of the I-275 ramps.

City crews were also able to clear debris and reopen Mehring Way between Carr Street and Elm Street. Mehring Way remains closed between Carr Street and the Sixth Street Expressway off Ramp as the flood wall must remain in place.

The status of these two streets will likely change over this weekend as current river forecasts project that flood waters may once again block these two roadways. Additional traffic advisories will be issued for this coming Sunday and Monday as the river level rises.
